TRAINING

At P&A we take complete care of managing your company’s Training Plan, from defining your training needs and designing contents and programs, to measuring results and making follow-up and proposals for improvement.

For us, the way towards change and learning must include:

1. Raising awareness. There must be an element that allows participants to become aware of the problem or situation in order to spark an impulse, interest or need for change and learning.

2. Property and management of the learning and change process. Within the defined context and given the issues that may arise regarding cohesion and collaboration, it is important that the participants feel in charge of the change and learning process and the results obtained. This will result in greater motivation and co-responsibility, as well as less risk.

3. Discovery. In line with the previous point, an informal and self-directed learning process is suggested in order for the participant to learn and change while discovering, investigating, analyzing and finding.

4. Measurement. It will be necessary to establish a measurement mechanism for the change and learning process as well as for the results obtained.
